Dear Kirsty,

It was nice to visit you and the schools last week and discuss the status of your GDPR programme.

I can confirm that I was very satisfied with the state of your baseline compliance, with very little in the way of visible data risks throughout all schools and comments and actions from our previous report taken on board. At this time, I don't find it necessary to report any additional actions relating to visible data handling within the Trust.

We are also very supportive of the approach to centralised core systems with live data - as you are aware this helps both data protection compliance as well as organisational efficiency.

The next step of our programme is to ensure that GDPR accountability and compliance is met throughout all data processing. Our framework is mapped against various standards, including the CIPL Accountability Wheel and the tools we have developed are in place to limit the increased burden, whilst satisfying the increased requirements relating to the documenting evidence of compliance.

DPE Framework / CIPL Accountability Wheel

In order to work through the next stage of this process, I would like to suggest another visit in the summer term, to select and review process definitions from our generic list in our record of the processing tool. The record of processing, aside from being a requirement under Article 30 of GDPR, when done properly provides you with data about the security and efficiency of the different processing activities, providing you with further data to feed into planning and priorities. Our record of processing tool, with its built-in risk assessment, also functions as a data protection impact assessment.

Can you suggest some dates after the Easter break that would be convenient?

Finally, I would encourage staff to be vigilant in relation to subject access requests, data breaches and any other concerns. I would recommend that staff complete our SAR and Data

Breach e-learning “nuggets” (5-10 minute online modules) as well as utilise our awareness posters.

I will be assigning the school managers/admins (as provided by Kim) to the knowledge bank and will ask my colleague Kalina to arrange some short remote sessions with them to take them through the platform and demonstrate how the e-learning can be accessed and the posters can be accessed and used.

If you have any questions on any matter at all, then please do contact me.

Sincerely,
James England
