Hi Rae,

Thank you for your time today. It was really good to meet you. Please find below further information relating to the third-party due diligence/privacy notice appendices:

- This link gives some information about what to consider with third party due diligence and shows you how to add the third-party and the software into the KB: <https://dataprotection.education/best-practice-update/296-due-diligence-step-by-step> Although as advised, I can help you with this if needed if you wish to send me your list when complete. - As you can see, most of the curriculum ones share the same data of pupil name and their class/year group so this is why some schools group them together.
- Be wary if it is not a UK-based company as then the data would not be stored in the UK and might need further due diligence.
- I would also advise, that because of the type of school you are, that further due diligence may be required around data sharing agreements with therapists.
- One not on the above list is the school photographer as they might store images of the pupils, so might need further due diligence.
- Should you wish to do further due diligence with a company then please contact me and I can help with that, or raise a ticket and list the company details.
- It might also be worth completing the very short checklist in the Supplier Due Diligence Best Practice Area as this gives an overall indication of where the organisation is: <https://dataprotection.education/best-practice-library/best-practice/due-diligence-best-practice-area>

If you have any further queries, please do not hesitate to contact me. If it is something urgent then I would advise raising a ticket on the KB or emailing dpo@dataprotection.education as I am sometimes out visiting schools.

Many thanks,
