Hi Sarah,

Thank you for your time yesterday and for showing me around your school. It was good to meet you. Please find attached the report as discussed. All of the information from the walk around is on the Knowledge Bank. Go to My Activities -> Making the Rounds. All observations, including positive ones are there, whereas the report itself covers any advisories there might be.

I couldn't find the photograph policy on your website to cross check like I did for the Infants?

I spoke to our legal director and James about the folder that was from another school and they agree that this should not have happened. The data is also very old, so should be destroyed. Staff should be reminded that pupil information cannot be taken from one school to another in this way as it is a data breach.

The other big concerns were the lack of physical security where there was a lock on one door to an office and not on the other door, which contained all SLT related data which would be private and confidential.

The 'vulnerable' wall and other displays containing photos, names and very sensitive data about children in open spaces and on the wall is a concern. This seems to be done as a passive way of teaching staff, rather than considering the private and confidential nature of the information relating to the child. This link from ICO talks about how we should be protecting children and their data: <https://ico.org.uk/for-organisations/guide-to-data-protection/ico-codes-of-practice/data-sharing-a-code-of-practice/data-sharing-and-children/>

It says a high level of privacy should be your default.

- Children's vulnerability means that the risks in sharing their data may be higher than in the similar processing of adults' data.

This document is mentioned in the report but is good practical advice for schools so wanted to highlight it:
