Hi Gill,

Just to advise that I have spoken to Orbis about the location of your server and the condition it is in. Firstly, access to a server location should only be by those that require access to the server, such as the technician, perhaps yourself and/or the head. By being in the PE cupboard, various students and staff have access. Secondly, a server should never be left by a technician with the key in it and open. The key should also have strict access controls. By being in that location under those circumstances the server is at risk from tampering and damage and as such a cyber risk. This means it could be damaged, switched off, or have something spilt on it that would stop it working. Whether something like this is done intentionally or by accident, it still constitutes a cyber attack which would be a threat to business continuity. If the server is damaged beyond repair, it is likely the school would need to close for at least a week and would cost around £10,000 to replace.

The person I spoke to at Orbis agrees with me and has escalated internally. They have asked if you could please raise a ticket with the helpdesk to log about the security and location. The call will be assigned to the technical manager who is going to look out for it. Please feel free to use any of the information that I have put in this email and I have attached the photos for you too.

I hope that helps,

Many thanks,

Tammy Buchanan
